Tension Erupts Over Colchester BOF Vote

By Toriana Williams

The Colchester Board of Finance meeting on Jan. 14 was marked by sharp political division, vocal public reaction and an applicant's abrupt departure, following the board's decision to appoint Republican Donna Antonacci to a vacant seat.

While the board addressed routine financial matters and ongoing projects during the meeting, the appointment – which was necessary to fill the seat vacated by Tim Vaillancourt after his election to the Board of Selectmen – became the focal point of the evening and prompted visible discord among board members and attendees alike.

The vacancy attracted two applicants: Antonacci, a former Board of Education chair, and fellow Republican Michael Dubreuil, who was endorsed by the Republican Town Committee. Since the seat had been held by a Republican, town charter mandated that it needed to be filled by a Republican.

According to a statement later provided by Board of Finance chair Karen Belding, a Democrat, the board sought candidates with experience as elected officials who could disagree respectfully, act honestly even when views differ, understand how to function effectively within a board structure and demonstrate familiarity with fiscal management, budget negotiations and fiscal decision-making.

Belding stated that Antonacci was selected based on her experience on the Board of Education, including overseeing budget cycles, her willingness to maintain principled positions even when unpopular and her direct, candid responses during the interview process.

By contrast, Belding stated that Dubreuil's past actions weighed heavily in the board's deliberations. She cited what she described as a history of spreading misinformation about the finance board, as well as a time when Dubreuil had "dragged our board into an unnecessary FOI dispute," and said he'd publicly accused board members of misconduct while the interview process was still underway. According to Belding, these actions raised concerns about Dubreuil's ability to work respectfully and collaboratively with town boards and officials.

"It's easy to answer a few short questions in an interview well, especially when you get a chance to hear them ahead of time and practice," Belding explained after the meeting. "What's harder is overcoming years of showing exactly how you will perform based on your own actions."

Public comment preceding the vote reflected strong feelings on both sides. Several residents spoke in support of Dubreuil, emphasizing his Republican Town Committee endorsement and arguing that the committee's recommendation should carry decisive weight. Others spoke in favor of Antonacci, citing her experience, her prior budget votes on the Board of Education and her willingness to work across party lines.

When the board moved to a vote, a majority supported appointing Antonacci, 4-1, with

Portland Looks Towards River Access

By Anne Lilburn

More than 30 years after local officials first started talking about it, and about eight years after the idea was revived, Portland will finally be making public access to the Connecticut River a reality.

Portland contains roughly nine miles of riverfront property, more than any other town in the state, but the vast majority of that land is privately owned. With this new riverfront access project, which is already under construction and is slated to open sometime in late spring, Portland residents will have a public boat launch, suitable for launching small, non-motorized boats, such as canoes or kayaks.

The site, which is called River Bend Landing, is located towards the end of Airline Road, near the Tilcon property, and the eventual plan calls for not just a boat launch, but a park area, with picnic tables, walking paths and native plants to attract wildlife back to the area.

For former Portland selectmen and Riverfront Access Committee co-chairs Rick Sharr and Louis Pear, seeing the project finally come to light is gratifying. Both men have lived in the town for roughly 50 years and both are outdoorsmen and kayakers who have spent a lot of time on the river. They started working on this project under former first selectwoman Susan Bransfield, and are now continuing it under current First Selectman Mike Pelton. Both Sharr, a Republican, and Pear, a Democrat, emphasized that the project, like many others in town, was a bipartisan effort where everyone worked together to achieve a goal that is now finally coming to fruition.

"I just always felt it was like an injustice to the town," said Sharr, "that we have all this river frontage, and you come to Portland and the first thing you see are oil storage tanks and asphalt plants and industrial stuff, and that's really not what the town is all about."

"The town's beautiful. It has all this woods and river frontage and forest," he added. He called it a "hidden gem."

Sharr said that originally, town leaders had explored locating the park near Wangunk Meadows, where the town owned a parcel of riverfront land, but plans for construction of an access road, parking area and boat launch ran into state regulations and concerns over protected species, including the Atlantic coast leopard frog. The process of seeking state approvals and moving on to alternate sites took years.

Eventually, the town settled on a different piece of land, downriver from the originally considered site, that had been granted to the town decades ago. Sharr and Pear both said they believed it had once been owned by the Field family, who owned a bakery in Middletown and used the land as grazing fields for the horses that pulled the delivery carts for their baked goods.

"It's a marsh land," said Pear, "so it really cannot be used for anything other than recreation."

This parcel of land allows access to a sandy beach and offers the advantage of being on the other side of the river from the main channel, Sharr said, meaning that the boat launch area along the shore will have a long, shallow section, particularly at low tide, making it possible to wade in to the river.

Sharr said the land had become overgrown

Community Garden Offering Plots for 2026

The Andover Community Garden Committee is currently looking for Andover residents who would like to have their own garden space. All ages and abilities are welcome and the spaces are free of charge. There spaces being offered on a first-come, first-serve basis for the 2026 growing season.

Bed owners will be responsible for planting approved vegetables, flowers, and herbs of their choice. They will also need to be able to commit to the scheduled watering and caretaking responsibilities of their bed as well as the end-of season bed cleanup. There are tools available for use by the committed gardeners and there is an on-site watering system. Members of the committee can be available to help with gardening questions you may have or problem solve with any difficulties you face during the gardening season. The community garden’s growing season begins in mid- to late May and may end in late September.

The 2025 year was a bountiful season filled with fresh produce and beautiful buds. Members of the Community Garden offered tours to members of the public during town-wide events as well as enjoyed Social Hours about once a month in the garden.

The addition of six trellises to promote vertical gardening seem to aid in creating additional space. One of the townspeople donated black-eyed susans which were planted in newly established raised beds along the perimeter of the garden and attracted many different types of pollinators. Andover Elementary School students built bird houses which aid the garden in a natural form of pest control. Bat houses and Purple Martin houses were also installed with the hopes of having some of these species take up residency at the garden.

Andover Elementary students also designed and executed two signs which were creatively painted. The students also voluntarily planted window boxes with annuals, participated in composting materials, and painted rocks which were displayed at each of the beds.

The Andover Community Garden Committee is welcoming any involvement that local residents and RHAM or Andover students would like to commit to for the 2026 growing season starting in May. This is a great opportunity for high school students to earn volunteer hours.

The committee’s 2026 goals include encouraging increased involvement of local organizations, seniors, and Andover students by providing fresh produce donations to the Andover Senior/Community Center to combat food insecurity and access to local produce. The committee is also dedicated to completing the water collection system as well as upgrading the current water system to conserve water and increase its efficiency.

To request a garden plot for 2026, volunteer, or for more information, feel free to message the Andover Community Garden Committee on their Facebook page “Andover (CT) Community Garden” or send an email to gardenandovercommunity@gmail.com.

Observations & Ruminations

By Mike Thompson

A week ago at this time, visions of a Buffalo Bills-Chicago Bears Super Bowl matchup were still dancing in my head.

When you choose to suffer through life as a New York Jets fan, you need to have post-season football teams to root for you. In recent years, that team has been the Kansas City Chiefs. But Patrick Mahomes & Co. relieved me of that responsibility when they turned in a lousy season this year and missed the playoffs altogether.

So my eyes turned to the Buffalo Bills. I’ve long had a soft spot for the Bills, who have never, ever won a Super Bowl. (Even the Jets have done that.) The last several seasons in particular, they’ve come close but have never been able to reach the top of the mountain. Usually, their January downfall has been at the hands of the Chiefs, so I was hoping, with KC out of the picture, that this might finally be their year.

And if they were going to play in the Super Bowl, what better opponents to have than the Chicago Bears, who hadn’t won a Super Bowl since 1986? The Bills vs. Da Bears; it would’ve been a heck of a matchup.

Alas, it wasn’t meant to be, as both teams suffered crushing losses in their respective playoff games last weekend. Yes, you could argue neither of the games should’ve gone to overtime to begin with, as both of the teams had chances to win in regulation. Buffalo quarterback Josh Allen turned the ball over a bunch, including on a particularly ill-advised run in the closing seconds of the first half.

The Bears, meanwhile, left points on the table multiple times in the first half of their game, opting to go for it on fourth down when they really should’ve just kicked the easy field goal. (My general feeling is there’s no reason to go for it on fourth down in the first quarter of a scoreless game.) They only made overtime when quarterback Caleb Williams made an amazing – AMAZING – touchdown pass at the end of the second half. Seriously, if you haven’t seen that throw yet, head over to YouTube and check it out (after you finish reading the Rivereast, of course).

The Bears’ loss in overtime was fairly routine – at least as routine as an overtime loss in a playoff game can be. The Bills’ defeat, though, featured a highly controversial call in which a ball that sure seemed like a catch was unfortunately ruled an interception by the opposing Denver Broncos. I’m no official, but like I said, it looked like a catch to me – and to millions of others across the country. It didn’t, however, to the referees, and ultimately those are the ones you need to impress. Instead of leading to a game-winning field goal for the Bills, the ball instead went to the Broncos, who never looked back.

Bills fans, not surprisingly, took to social media in droves after the game, with many alleging that the game was fixed, that the NFL wanted the Broncos to win and thus saw to it that they did. I just.....don’t see that. Sometimes a bad call is just a bad call. In fact, most of the time a bad call is just a bad call. And what happened last weekend was simply a bad call. It stinks, but hopefully the Bills will be back in the playoffs next year – and maybe this time, they’ll reach the top of that mountain.

As I write this Tuesday night, the jury is very much still out in regards to whether we’ve

Bulletin Board

I saw recently that National Geographic plans to screen an upcoming film about Jim Morrison.

Now I think The Doors was a great band back in the day, but I couldn’t for the life of me understand why National Geographic would put together a film about a dead rock musician who sang about hitchhikers whose brains were “squirming like a toad.” As for Morrison’s affection for the Great Outdoors, it’s my understanding that the only time the guy went outside was to buy heroin.

Well, it turns out there’s another Jim Morrison. This Jim Morrison is a 50-year-old mountaineer who is presently being lionized in the press as the first person to ski down the Hornbein Couloir on the north face of Mount Everest. That’s right, he donned a pair of skis and launched himself down freaking Mount Everest.

An internet entry under “Historic Achievements” observes that Morrison’s route “is known for its steep and treacherous conditions with a slope of up to 50 degrees.” The descent took over four hours and was documented for the National Geographic film.

I’m not sure this sort of insanity merits commemoration as an “historic achievement,” but I will admit that the film clip of this guy skiing down an impossible slope is pretty impressive. At least one recent newscast went so far as to laud him as a “hero.”

Right.

Now I’ve read about any number of heroes and even met a couple, and if you want my opinion, some nut who launches himself down Mount Everest on a pair of skis isn’t a hero.

He’s an imbecile.

Furthermore, I think it’s terribly insensitive to go merrily skiing past the frozen corpses of dozens of unprepared optimists who, having paid tens of thousands of dollars for the privilege, started up Everest with the cheery observation, “What could possibly go wrong?”

Perhaps a more appropriate question would be, “What is the point?”

Yeah, it’s true. I hate to be a killjoy, but I’m not an admirer of the Mount Everest quest—neither climbing up nor skiing down. I just don’t get it. Particularly now that the “quest” to get to the top of the world seems to have turned into an assembly line commercial venture. Which doesn’t mean you shouldn’t make sure your life insurance policy is fully paid up—assuming you can even get one.

I tend to take a more mature view of these so-called “challenges.” As a gutless coward who is afraid of heights and isn’t too crazy about snow and cold in general, I’m more likely to meet my end in less spectacular fashion, perhaps in a slip and fall on my way out to the mailbox, or (more likely still) by choking on a potato chip or piece of cheese while chortling over one of my own jokes at some family gathering.

But while I’m personally in no danger of ever perishing on Everest (trust me), I fear Morrison’s exploit is likely to encourage imitators who may not be so lucky. With this in mind, a recent online review of Morrison’s feat felt compelled to offer some cautionary advice to those who may now be inspired to retrieve their dusty old skis from the basement or garage and hop on the next flight to Nepal.

The article warned that skiing down Everest involves harsh weather, high altitudes, incredible cold, altitude sickness, and a ‘death zone’ above 8,000 meters that presents “significant risks” (which I guess is why they call it the “death zone”). The article suggested skiers should have a well-planned ascent and descent strategy, use appropriate gear, and be prepared for sudden weather changes.”

Or, if you simply must go skiing, you could just drive up to Stowe for the weekend. National Geographic won’t be interested, but your insurance agent would certainly be happier.

As for me, when the time comes, I plan to stay home, turn up the heat to a comfortable level and watch Jim Morrison’s failed suicide attempt on television from my favorite overstuffed chair. The visuals should be spectacular. And who knows? Maybe the film features a soundtrack from The Doors.

This is Unacceptable

To the Editor:

Hebron is now staring down a projected $27.8 million price tag to rebuild the DPW facility on its existing site. This number does not include the additional expenses we will all be forced to absorb: temporary DPW relocation (@ an estimated $5 million based on a report in 2022), two years of curbside trash pickup, and the loss of access to our recycling center during construction.

It bears repeating how we arrived here.

In 2019, the town purchased the Horton Property for $600,000 with the stated – and approved - intent of building a new DPW facility. Three years later, as plans for the new facility were revealed and discussed (and $250,000 was spent on those plans and property analysis), a very small number of nearby residents began loudly, and repeatedly, warning of catastrophic impacts to bedrock water and private wells. Week after week, they filled this paper with lofty rhetoric about environmental tourism, stone wall laneways, and the “historic nature” of a multi-acre parcel that, to this day, serves no functional purpose for the town.

After months of this pressure, a survey was conducted in 2023 to “assess town interest.” In a town of roughly 9,000 residents, 92 people responded, and 69 said no to the Horton Property

DPW plan. Less than 1% of our town’s population is driving this controversy. That is the thin reed on which a multimillion-dollar decision now rests.

We are now told the Horton Property should be preserved for environmental tourism – with no plan, no funding source, and no honest discussion of what that would cost taxpayers. If the new DPW facility is approved it is unlikely the over-burdened taxpayers in Hebron will ever agree to this.

This is not responsible governance. It is not environmental stewardship. And it is certainly not fair to the thousands of residents who did not realize that silence would cost them tens of millions of dollars.

In fact, the town would have every right to try to recoup its nearly $1 million investment in the Horton Property by selling it to a developer who could build affordable housing units. That would be one way Hebron could comply with the State of CT mandate on this subject.

We should be honest about what happened here: a small, vocal group stopped a necessary project, and now the entire town is being asked to pay for that obstruction — financially and operationally — for decades to come.

That is unacceptable.

Sincerely,
Jim & Kris Payant, Hebron

‘Teach Your Parents Well’
To the Editor:
Martin Luther King Jr. Day dawned peacefully. The puffs of snow, undisturbed by wind, created a cover on the trees not unlike foliage. I was up before the crows. All was calm. All was bright. It was as if Earth herself was paying homage to a man of peace and courage.
The Rivereast of Jan. 9 had three great reads. The first, was the cover story about saving land associated with the Girl Scout Camp in Lebanon.

The second was a letter to the editor reminding us about the Jan. 29th town meeting, at the Douglas Library at 7 p.m. At this meeting residents can vote on whether, or not, Hebron should purchase a piece of land, not for Open Space specifically, but open land for possible future town use.

The third story was about Hebron’s Green Committee and their commitment to recycling including, repurposing kitchen waste. Elementary school is a terrific place to start. Little kids speak with wisdom and are not yet afraid to correct or teach adults. Teaching kids about ecology, composting and recycling, at any age, makes responsible actions an integral part of their present lives and their futures as well. The late David Crosby might agree that parents teaching their children, who then teach their parents, is a great way to grow up.

Jan. 16th brought an interesting letter from a member of the DPW Action Committee speaking as a resident. I was thrilled to read the suggestion of selling the 88.6 acres, known as 17 Kinney Rd., to us, at #save17. It would be an honor and an adventure to own this property. We could put up a sign, The Raymond Brook Park Extension. I would dedicate the park to the memory of Andrea Lattanzi. Her support with #save17, especially during my melt downs, will never be forgotten. Fare thee well kind lady, may our paths cross again...maybe even.... right here... on Kinney Rd.

#save17 is flattered but there are better qualified organizations namely Hebron’s Open Space. Hebron could not have purchased 17 Kinney Rd. without the generous support of Open Space and this is where it belongs. Perhaps we could have a fundraiser for the balance due, thus keeping it “in the family.” The property has such potential to be a show-stopper with QR hitching posts and trails. A great place for people of all ages.

Dementia Talks No. 46
To the Editor:
One question I hear now and again is “should we” celebrate [insert the “it” here]? Typically, the question comes when there is a significant date sitting on the calendar. It could be a birthday, anniversary or something else that has been significant in the past. Significant to your loved one, to you, to your family, to friends. The “it” can run the gamut.

Most of the time folks mull over the question because their loved one will likely forget the event even took place.

My typical response is to find out more about the “it,” then ask a question: “Why not celebrate?”

Of course there are all kinds of layers to be peeled back, but in the end “why not” do it? With a quick follow up to say – the actual day of the celebration isn’t as important in comparison to the who, the time of day and the place. And ask yourself what outcome would be the best for your loved one?

The phase of your loved one’s dementia journey can help guide and inform you as to the who, the time of day and the place.

I’ll use my mom’s birthday as an example. Last January we did a ‘party’ with her friends in memory-care, my sister, myself and my husband – all in all, around 15 people. This year, we dialed it back to just the four of us. There wasn’t much planning, it happened organically, and it was simple. My sister made the cupcakes; we did it during Mom’s lunch time and we leveraged one of the family spaces in the building. It was perfect for all of us.

The outcome we were seeking was simple – togetherness. Which just happened to include a “Happy Birthday” song and homemade dessert. In the moment we all connected, enjoyed each other’s company, laughed, sang and celebrated in our own way. Mom participated and enjoyed herself – if she is laughing and smiling, she is happy.

I recall the last year of my dad’s life (cancer), it seemed we celebrated everything! If the coffee brewed – we celebrated!

If the date was something your loved one celebrated, I say “why not do it?” So, take a breath, think simple and enjoy your time with your loved one.

Thank you for reading and know that you are not alone.

With much love and peace,

DPWAC Update
To the Editor:
Hello Hebron residents! I am back speaking as the Vice Chairman of the DPWAC. By the time you read this, we as a committee will have had our regular meeting on Jan. 20th, and we will have made a presentation to the Hebron Town Council at their regular meeting on 1/22/26.

Here’s what’s new: Our DPWAC had a special meeting with the town attorney regarding how to legally, best get the word out to the residents about the old facility and the proposed new/rebuilt facility. We as a committee are not allowed to show favoritism (advocacy) for this project, nor can we dissuade people from it either. Hence the reason my letter last week was from me, speaking as a resident. At our meeting a Political Action Committee (PAC) was suggested as the best way the information could be shared with Hebron residents. This without the fear of being fined for showing advocacy. As a town appointed committee, we are charged with gathering information and presenting it to the Town Council. Once they have the information they have requested of the committee, they authorize the town manager to move forward.

FYI, this is the first time in 15 years that actual site analysis, schematic design plans, and building plans have actually happened. All of the past ideas had not come this far.

An RFP will be published soon for town trash service. The cost to the town of Hebron for curbside pickup of MSW and recyclables, as well as a plan to handle our bulky waste. Bid to be to the town by 2/6/26.

As a member of the DPWAC, I have learned firsthand how the town government process works. Governments have to be transparent, share things and vote to make things happen. Businesses can be much nimbler, getting multiple plans together for a project and making the best decision for the company. We, as a town, had to go to a town meeting in the library and vote to spend $1.5 million (approximately $750,000 up front, and $750,000 rolled into the build) to assess just this one project. Thank you all for reading along, as always, please email me at: thabicht@hebron.gov with any questions or comments that you may have.

Sincerely,
Todd Habicht, Vice Chairman
Hebron DPWAC

A Worthy Project
To the Editor:
Last week’s Rivereast brought up the issue again of what to do with the Horton property (Governor Peters’ farm /#17 Kinney Road). Unfortunately, the town has not fulfilled its State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) Archaeological Reconnaissance Survey obligations which clearly states “plans should include additional title search into Gilbert and Backus land-holdings.” The report was prominently published on the town’s webpage for almost a year, but no action was taken. SHPO only approved development of a very small portion of the Horton property based on archaeological investigation and pending a thorough title search. The Horton property includes Governor Peters’, Sylvester Gilbert’s and Levi Backus’ farms which SHPO never cleared for development.

Given this mandate from SHPO, Hebron’s Historic Properties, Town Historian, Zoning Commission, and Town Planner should be actively involved in researching the land’s connection to Hebron’s past. Governor Peters’ connections to the land are well researched. However, many other questions need to be researched and serious consideration given to rezone this property adding it to Hebron’s abutting National Register Historic District and Raymond Brook Preserve.

Preliminary findings strongly indicate that the land is of great local historical importance and should not be developed. It is currently farmed and has been for over a millennium. In its earliest days, it augmented Hebron’s town center, is associated with three historically significant Hebron families and has a Revolutionary War connection. Given that information, the land deserves to be considered as a Hebron Historic Property. Undoubtedly, additional research would provide other significant findings. The land deserves to be treated respectfully and left alone to preserve Hebron’s “rural, historic character.”

Rather than compromising the Horton Property, if anyone really wants to consider an alternative site for relocating the Hebron Transfer Station/Public Works Complex, the town owned old Hebron landfill on Mill Stream Road would be a good choice. It has never been properly sealed and leaches into Amston’s water supply. Environmental remediation could be combined with building plans. Given these circumstances, Old Colchester Road still seems like the better choice.

The Horton Property is historically, agriculturally and ecologically significant. It should be at the center of town government’s Hebron250 initiatives. After all, the Horton Property visually introduces Hebron’s Historic District and Preserve America designation to motorists on Route 85. First appearances are important and make a statement about a town’s priorities!

got a monster snowstorm coming this weekend. One thing’s for certain, though: It’s going to be really freakin’ cold. Like, wind chills of 15 to 20 below zero cold. Air temps won’t be much better, hovering around or even below zero. It’s going to be bad.

I won’t blame any of you, then, for thinking of spring. Instead of seeing a frozen wasteland when you look out your kitchen window, perhaps you’ll see a blossoming garden, beautiful green plants, and happy honeybees buzzing around.

The arrival of spring may still be a couple of months away, but the sights – and yes, the smells – of the season will be on full display at the annual Connecticut Flower & Garden Show, which will return to the Connecticut Convention Center in Hartford from Thursday, Feb. 19, through Sunday, Feb. 22.

The theme of this year’s show is “A Storybook Garden.” Featured will be 150,000 square feet of expansive live gardens, nonstop seminars and demonstrations, the Feder-

Nostalgia is Great, But....

To the Editor:

It was with great delight and much nostalgia that I read in the Rivereast News Bulletin’s Jan. 2 issue ‘A Holiday Love Letter to Connecticut.’ We do live in an extremely unique community, this town of Hebron.

But I wanted to address a couple of statements in the letter. The first is: “no one longs to live here for the public works facilities.” While I understand what is being said here, I would like to say that no one longs to live in a community with a dysfunctional facility. It is my opinion that the current facility should have been condemned over a decade ago and the town is remiss in its stewardship of worker safety by allowing employees to continue to work there.

On a different note, the author notes that ated Garden Clubs of Connecticut’s annual Standard Flower Show, and hundreds of exhibitors selling not just plants, but everything outdoorsy – garden ornaments, metalwork sculptures, patio furniture, lawn/garden tools and equipment, and more.

If you’re curious about what may be best for your particular yard, you can even bring half a cup of soil for free testing to UConn Home & Garden Education Center booth.

Discounted admission tickets – at $17 for adults and seniors – can be purchased now at www.CTFlowerShow.com. A full schedule of seminars and demonstrations is also available on the website.

Do you have your own business and perhaps want to exhibit your wares at the show? You can do that too! Just go to the website, look for “CT Flower Garden Show” on Facebook, or call 860-844-8461.

See you next week.

“Their parents cared, their grandparents cared, they care, and their children care.” I agree with this statement. I’ve hardly ever encountered a citizen of this town that does not care. But I want to look at the tense of this sentence: their parents and their grandparents cared – past tense. “They care, and their children care.” And while this is most probably true, current demographic trends, as reflected in the Hebron 2024 Plan of Conservation and Development, show that this ‘caring’ seems to wear thin as most of the children that reach their 20s and most of the 45-55 demographic move out of town.

I’m thinking this nostalgic view of life has diminished as the economic demands of this century weigh on young adults looking for work and a place to live – and who increasingly do not find those opportunities in the town of Hebron. As that reality sets in, many parents also begin to recognize that their children are unlikely to return, and they too start looking for another place to live.

Nostalgia is a wonderful thing. But I think economics and infrastructure win out in the end.

No Kings

To the Editor:

At the Jan. 14, 2026 Board of Finance meeting, Bernie Dennler’s Democratic administration made one thing painfully clear: they have little respect for the voice of Colchester voters.

That night, the board appointed former Board of Education member Donna Antonacci to fill a vacant Republican seat on the Board of Finance, passing over Michael Dubreuil. This was not a judgment call made in a vacuum. Voters had already spoken, loudly and recently.

Just three months ago, Donna Antonacci was on the ballot. Voters rejected her. In fact, she was the lowest vote getter in the entire election, failing to receive even 800 votes. Michael Dubreuil, meanwhile, had the second-highest Republican vote total overall and was the top Republican vote getter for the Board of Finance. He received nearly three times the votes Antonacci did.

Republicans in town were even clearer. The Colchester Republican Town Committee unanimously voted to endorse Mr. Dubreuil to fill the vacancy. They also resoundingly rejected Donna Antonacci as a representative. She was removed from the RTC over two years ago, was not reinstated this year, and was not nominated by Republicans to represent them in the November election.

Yet Democrats ignored both the electorate and the local Republican Party. Why? We were told why during the meeting itself. Jillian Vinci was heard saying, “They did this to us.” This decision was not about what was best for Colchester. It was about political payback.

It certainly was not about the interviews. Nobody who watched them walked away believing Donna Antonacci was a strong candidate, let alone the better candidate. Perhaps performance matters less than socializing with the people who get to decide.

I was also told by a Democratic friend on the BOF that they believed Antonacci would be detrimental to the town. That they could not, and would not, vote for Donna and that at least one other member shared that view. However, Bernie and other Democratic leadership refused to allow Mr. Dubreuil to serve on the board.

Democrats chose loyalty over integrity. They ignored voters, ignored Republicans, and ignored their own stated beliefs. They followed party politics, not their constituents. This is completely juxtaposed by the Republicans’ handling of Bernie Dennler’s previous BOF appointment.

Here I thought Democrats were against kings. It turns out that for local Democrats, it’s not “No Kings” but “as long as we’re King.”

Jason LaChapelle, Colchester

A Holiday Season
Thank You

To the Editor:

As we turn the page on the holidays, I want to thank our customers in Andover for the kindness and support you showed our local Postal Service team during the busiest mailing and shipping season of the year.

Our carriers, clerks, and plant teams worked hard to keep mail and packages moving for families, small businesses, and neighbors who rely on us. Behind every delivery is a local employee who lives here, shops here, and cares about getting it right.

Now that the holiday rush is behind us, our focus is simple: steady, dependable service every day – along with continued improvements that help us handle today’s mix of letters and packages more efficiently.

If you had a great experience with your local Post Office this season, I hope you’ll share it with our team. And if we missed the mark, please let us know so we can keep improving at usps.com.

Sincerely,
Kristen Fitzpatrick

Lamont Has Got to Go!

To the Editor:

Our governor is attempting to push more restrictive gun regulations on our law-abiding Connecticut residents! Our senators, Murphy and Blumenthal, are no better. They are trying to disarm us, too.

Our governor and our Democratic so-called leaders want more restrictive regulations. Some examples: Legislation to make gun owners liable if a thug steals one of your guns and uses it in a crime! (HB-5487); Legislation forcing in-home daycare operators to disclose that they have firearms in their home or close down! (HB-6180).

These Democrats pass laws that do nothing to stop crime! A ban on the sale of AR-15 rifles, our ‘Red Flag Gun Seizure,’ our age requirements to own guns, our ban on private ammunition sales, our ban on open carry, our magazine limits – none of these laws have stopped crime in Connecticut! They limit our citizens from protecting themselves and their families! Criminals don’t obey any laws!

How about an automatic death penalty within seven days of being found guilty of anyone attempting to murder someone? How about shipping all criminals to a prison in a foreign country? A country that feeds prisoners only bread and water. A country that does not give free dental and free medical. No gym to go to daily, etc. Let’s give these a try and see if it affects our crime rate.

Next election we have to flush the toilet!

DPW Action Committee Remains Focused
To the Editor:
The Hebron Public Works facility project continues to move forward thanks to the diligent efforts of the DPW Action Committee. Tasked with facilitating the rebuilding of the existing Old Colchester Road (OCR) facility, the committee has approached its work with fiscal responsibility, public safety, and the public’s best interests firmly in mind. Committee members have devoted significant time to evaluating the condition of the current facility, the operational needs of the DPW, and the financial impact of various options.
While some residents continue to advocate for relocating the facility to 17 Kinney Rd., that location plays a vital role in preserving well water sources for surrounding properties and protecting overall water quality. The land also carries historical significance spanning hundreds of years, making its preservation especially important to the character and sustainability of the area. Reinvesting in the existing site avoids unnecessary costs, environmental risk, and the loss of valuable natural and historical resources.
The DPW Action Committee’s work reflects a strong commitment to smart planning and responsible stewardship. Residents are encouraged to support the committee’s efforts and the meaningful progress already achieved, ensuring this critical project remains focused on facts, collaboration, and the long-term interests of the entire community.

Quilt Project Thanks
To the Editor:
A little over a year ago, while working at Colchester Mill & Fabrics, I was inspired by a group of women from Bozrah that had designed and made a quilt with subject matter relating to their town. They had raffled off the quilt and the proceeds went to support a community organization. What a creative way to honor your town. I wanted to do something like this for East Hampton, specifically to benefit the East Hampton Food Bank; but I needed help. At the fabric store I began recruiting quilters who might be interested in working on this project and were from East Hampton. Over the next few months, I gathered a group of women. Now the real work began.
We took pictures of notable local spots and historic sites; some of our pictures came from the local historical society. Pictures got traced to paper, fabric got picked out and traded among the group. Some fabric even went to England where the Lake Pocotopaug block was made. Each of us spent hours creating our squares. We consulted with each other, learned new things and helped each other along the way. This quilt was truly a labor of love.
I would like to thank everyone involved in helping complete the East Hampton Quilt. To the quilt designers – Joanne Barmasse, Jean Cote, Sylvia Demore, Lori Harris, Stefani Lowe, Cynthia Masters-Waage, Sharon Owen, Terri Pangretic, Charlie Williams and Katie Williams – thanks to all of you on your hard work on this project! I would also like to thank Cheryl Dolloff, owner of Colchester Mill & Fabrics for donating materials for this project. A very special thank you to Joanne Barmasse, who was instrumental in getting this project complete. Her attention to detail, sewing experience and networking abilities are second to none! I could not have done it without you. Thank you to the Rotary Club for your match of our raffle ticket sales. Also, thank you to the East Hampton community for your generous support. The final benefit to the East Hampton Food Bank from this project was $9,066.
Finally, congratulations to Gail Cavanaugh, owner of The Hairitage, who was the winner of the quilt.

Minority Representation Matters
To the Editor:
Jan. 14, 2025, should concern anyone who values fair process and representative government in Colchester. On that evening, a vacant Republican seat on the Board of Finance was filled without the support of the Republican Party or the voters of Colchester.
Two candidates were considered. One was selected by the Democratic majority. The other – myself – was the candidate endorsed by the Republican Town Committee and supported by voters, having earned thousands of votes in prior Board of Finance elections. I participated fully in the interview process, presented my qualifications, and answered detailed questions from the board.
The outcome made clear that the interview process did not meaningfully factor into the decision. Regardless of qualifications, endorsements, or demonstrated voter support, the selection reflected a predetermined outcome rather than an open evaluation of candidates.
The candidate selected by Democrats is described as qualified based on her prior service on the Board of Education. During that tenure, significant staffing changes affecting the town’s finance operations occurred with the Board of Education’s knowledge, resulting in the loss of experienced personnel and contributing to financial and operational instability for the town. She also supported a rule change that limited the ability of citizens to bring matters directly before the Board of Education.
While she is registered as a Republican, she is not among the 50 members of the Republican Town Committee, the body charged with representing Republican voters and endorsing candidates for Republican seats. Her record reflects a longstanding unwillingness to work collaboratively with Republicans on local issues – so much so that she was removed from the Republican Town Committee years ago and was not endorsed by Republicans in the 2025 election.
Party registration alone does not make someone representative of a party’s values or its voters. When a governing majority fills an opposition seat with a candidate rejected by that party and its electorate, it undermines public trust and weakens the legitimacy of the process. Reasonable people can disagree on the final selection, but not on the importance of a credible and transparent process. Local government works best when decisions are made in the open and confidence in the process matters more than which party benefits.

Colchester residents deserve a local government that respects voter intent, values open process, and treats minority-party representation as a safeguard – not an inconvenience.

Respectfully,
Michael Dubreuil

Hebron DPW Project
To the Editor:
There has been a flurry of letters recently with numbers and estimates related to the building of a DPW facility at either Kinney Rd or Old Colchester Rd. The tone of some of these letters has the classic New England resistance to governance. A healthy dose of “Don’t Tread on Me” and “The Government Lies!” is what has kept our form of governance the town meeting in New England long after the rest of the country moved on.
People have come to meetings and asked, “What about Plan B?” The fact of the matter is that OSHA and the employee unions are taking action. The town has already incurred fines from OSHA and will continue to do so until the facility is fixed. Union legal action is on the horizon if we don’t start making good faith efforts to improve the facility. Repairs in a building this old and undersized will only postpone the inevitable. A new building will have to be built at some point. The longer we kick the can down the road the more expensive it will be. We have already experienced that lesson once. Let’s not do it again.
I have been elected to represent the residents of this town and to try to make the best decisions for the town. Now this may not always be the best decision for an individual person, that’s not how community works. Not everyone gets their way every time. I want to assure you that I will have your financial interests in mind any time I make a decision for our town. Making sure your tax dollars are spent prudently and that you get the best return on your investment in this community are my only goals.

I understand the hesitancy to believe me; it’s what we do in Connecticut. Please, please, come to a meeting, email any of the council or board members, review the videos and agenda packets online that contain all the documentation, and ask questions in a place where they can be answered. I am confident that in the end you will see that we made the most prudent decisions and made every effort to save everyone money on something that can’t continue to be kicked down the road. To vote no on this just to spite the system will end up costing us all more in the long run. We can’t keep sacrificing the future to make the present more comfortable. Just like when we put forth the town budget, there is no second option. Participate in the process, and in the end trust your elected officials to serve you.

Misinformation in Hebron
To the Editor:
Thank you to the Department of Public Works Action Committee for acknowledging significant misinformation contained in a letter to the editor published in the Rivereast on Jan. 9th. At the DPWAC meeting on Jan. 13th, the committee specifically identified the statement of an $8,725,000 cost for the DPW project at Kinney Road as “very serious misinformation.” The committee corrected the record by stating that price was BL Architects’ estimate for the DPW garage building ONLY! There were no site work costs or other infrastructure included. The committee continued to confirm the 2018 estimate for the total project was $18 to $20 million. Given the increase of construction costs following Covid and additional tariffs, the current estimate by Silver Petrucelli + Associates for $27,800,501 is well within expectations. The DPWAC went on to clarify that the Kinney Road site may in fact cost more than the present plans for Old Colchester Road. This is a major

The Portland Historical Society will hold its Annual Meeting this Sunday, Jan. 25. The gathering will feature a program, “Castles Along the Connecticut,” presented by local resident and society member Alain Munkittrick. The program will highlight a selection of historic houses of the Connecticut River Valley inspired by castle architecture, including William Gillette’s “Seventh Sister” in East Haddam and Portland’s St. Clements.

Historical Society Annual Meeting

The Portland Historical Society will hold its Annual Meeting Sunday, Jan. 25, from 2-4 p.m., at the Waverly Senior Center, 7 Waverly Ave. After a brief business meeting to present the proposed 2026 budget, an election will be held to determine the society's officers and directors.

A program, “Castles Along the Connecticut,” will be presented by local resident and society member Alain Munkittrick. In 1604 Sir Edward Coke penned the dictum that has come to mean “a man's home is his castle.” If perhaps relevant at a time when a nobleman sought defensible shelter from the Highwaymen (or the High Sheriff!), why has the fortress persisted as an architectural signifier in the modern age?

Munkittrick's talk will present a selection of historic houses of the Connecticut River Valley inspired by castle architecture, including William Gillette's “Seventh Sister” and St. Clements. While many of these high seats overlooking the Connecticut River appear in his book, Historic Houses of the Connecticut River Valley, Munkittrick will discuss many other examples discovered during his research.

All members as well as the public are invited to attend. A gathering time with refreshments will happen at the conclusion of the program.

She then joined forces with Brianna Gustavson, Abigail Hambridge, Shannon Mahoney as the Bellringers 4x800 relay team also took first with a time of 11:16.11.

Aaron Ciarleglio – Portland High School (Basketball): Ciarleglio scored 16 points as the Highlanders traveled to Clinton and beat Morgan, 63-62, in a Shoreline Conference clash on Jan 13. Ciarleglio, a senior, has assumed a bulk of the offensive load this season, also pouring in 30 points during the team’s 51-47 road victory over Coginchaug on Jan. 6. The Highlanders, currently 4-5 overall, will next welcome Valley Regional to Portland High School tonight (Friday, Jan. 23) for a game at 7 p.m.

son, Brody Kokofski, and Danny Mantilla on the Raptors 4x200 relay team that also crossed the finish line first with a time of 1:40.03, ahead of ten other squads at the Bacon Field House in Middletown.

Valerie Luizzi – Colchester/Keene State (Basketball): Luizzi surpassed 1,000 career points on the college courts, becoming the 22nd player at Keene State University to eclipse the four-digit scoring mark. Luizzi, 2022 graduate of Bacon Academy, hit the mark during a 14-point performance in a 75-49 win at Plymouth State University on Jan. 6. In the contest, Luizzi also grabbed her 400th career rebound, becoming only the ninth player in program history to reach both the 1,000-point milestone and 400-career rebound mark. During her senior season in New Hampshire, Luizzi is averaging 17 points, 8 rebounds, 3 assists, and 2 steals per game for an Owls team that has an overall record of 11-5 as of publication. Prior to college basketball, Luizzi was an all-conference player for a Bobcats basketball team that made the state championship during her senior season at Bacon Academy.

member John Thomas, a Republican and chair of the Republican Town Committee, as the lone dissenting vote. Following the decision, Dubreuil stood and left the meeting room. Almost immediately afterward, the atmosphere in the room escalated.

One attendee could be heard audibly responding to the appointment by saying, “What a joke.” Thomas agreed with the remark, stating, “What a joke’ is right.”

Earlier, Thomas voiced his objections at length, expressing concern about party balance and what he characterized as the board’s voting tendencies. He stated, “As the sole Republican on this board right now, and knowing the track record of the voting candidate that has been recommended by two of our fellow board members, sounds like it’s going to be a 5 to 1 and not a very fair board.”

He alleged that Antonacci’s voting record did not show a history of conservative decisions, “and I don’t believe that’s fair to the town of Colchester. ... Therefore, I would definitely not recommend Donna.”

As Thomas spoke, and following the vote, additional comments were made from the audience. Among them was a statement made by an attendee, who could be heard saying that board members “don’t care about all citizens of Colchester across party lines.”

Belding attempted to restore order as comments continued, from attendees and board members alike, asking everyone to “stop” and urging everyone to “respect the protocols of the meeting.” Her remarks were followed by continued interruptions before order was eventually regained.

Shortly after Antonacci was sworn in, a brief recess was requested before the meeting resumed its regular agenda. When the meeting reconvened, Antonacci took her seat at the table and participated as a member for the remainder of the session.

Despite the contentious appointment, the Board of Finance proceeded with other business. The board reviewed departmental and financial reports, discussed ongoing budget monitoring and addressed capital-related matters. Among the items discussed were projects involving town and school facilities, including athletic infrastructure improvements. The board also reviewed resolutions related to bonding and capital planning, with members discussing affordability, debt service sharing between the town and the Board of Education and the importance of maintaining aging facilities.

The finance board also took several routine actions, including approvals of prior meeting minutes and procedural motions related to financial oversight. No final budget decisions were made during the session.

In a written statement submitted separately following the meeting, Dubreuil criticized the decision, stating, “The Democratic majority on the Board of Finance filled a Republican seat with a candidate who was not endorsed by Republicans and was opposed by the chairman of the Republican Town Committee, despite his clear vote against her selection.”

He argued that the explanation offered for the appointment – improving coordination between the Board of Finance and the Board of Education – was unconvincing, characterizing the move as political gamesmanship and expressing disappointment that partisan considerations were prioritized over what he described as the will of Colchester residents.

Supporters of Antonacci and members who voted in favor of her appointment rejected that characterization, however, and pointed to prior instances in which town committee endorsements were not treated as binding.

Belding referred to a 2024 incident in which Thomas and Vaillancourt dramatically walked out of a Board of Finance meeting in protest of the Democratic majority’s preferred choice to fill a vacancy, effectively blocking the vote from taking place. They later issued a joint statement saying they would not attend any future finance board meeting if a vote on the vacancy was included on the agenda.

“Both [Thomas] and [Vaillancourt] broke quorum so the board could not meet, could not vote on filling the seat, and further could not even conduct normal business that needed to happen, all to stop that applicant from being voted onto the board,” Belding said. “So it seems quite hypocritical now that [Thomas] and others demand that the board must vote for whoever the appropriate town committee endorses this time.”

While last week’s meeting ultimately adjourned without further incident, but the events surrounding Antonacci’s appointment underscored ongoing political tension within the Board of Finance and among town residents. As the board moves into the upcoming budget season, it will do so with a full slate of members – and with lingering questions about governance, representation and process that were laid bare during a meeting marked by raised voices, a walkout and sharp disagreement.

Colchester’s Hall of Fame Coach Honored

By Josh Howard

On Jan. 18, former Colchester resident David Zettervall was inducted into the Connecticut Girls’ Soccer Coaches Association (CGSCA) Hall of Fame.

Zettervall, who passed away in 2010, was one of three Class of 2025 inductees that were honored at a ceremony held at the Aqua Turf in Plantsville.

Known as “Coach Z,” Zettervall was the founder of the inaugural Norwich Free Academy (NFA) girls soccer program in 1985 and would go on to coach the Wildcats in Norwich until his death, amassing over 250 victories. His tenure included multiple conference championships and a pair of state quarterfinals appearances. Over his 25 years on the sidelines, his soccer squads only missed the state playoffs twice.

He was also heavily involved in athletics locally where he coached Colchester Youth Soccer and Colchester Little League. It was here that he had a chance to coach his two sons, Sean and Eric.

David Zettervall

Sean Zettervall, who now coaches youth sports in Colchester, reflected on his father’s unwavering hard work to his craft and dedication to his community.

“He always wanted to be there for other people,” he added. “Everybody remembers him as somebody that you could count on.”

Eric Zettervall said he learned about “staying humble” from his dad, stating, “He taught us that you are only as good as your last game and now I try and live by that.”

Throughout his two and a half decades coaching at NFA, Zettervall was regularly recognized for his ability to bring out the best in the team. In 2002, he was selected as the Connecticut High School Coaches Association (CHSCA) Girls Soccer Coach of the Year and a year later, he was the recipient of the 2002-2003 Gatorade High School Coaches Association Outstanding Coach award.

The latest honor is the second time Zettervall entered a hall of fame; he was also inducted into the Southeast Connecticut Junior Soccer Association Hall of Fame in the Class of 2009.

Born in Torrington in 1952, Zettervall went to Harvard University on a scholarship, where he received his bachelor’s degree in Cambridge, Mass. before returning to his home state to obtain his master’s degree from the University of Connecticut.

He would later marry his wife, Diane, and the couple would live in Colchester with their two sons. He began working as a math teacher at NFA in 1980 and five years later would help launch the girls soccer program at the private school.

Zettervall would coach the Wildcats until his death in April of 2010 when he passed away at the age of 57 following a battle with cancer.

At last weekend’s ceremony, several members of Zettervall’s family were in attendance and his two sons accepted the Hall of Fame plaque.

Sean Zettervall said his father’s latest honor is a reflection of the legacy that he left.

“Helping people was his passion,” he added.

“I watched how hard he worked, so it’s nice to know that he is getting recognized for it.

Former NFA soccer players were also on hand, which Eric Zettervall said was “special to see.”

“It was stunning to see people who played on his teams in the ‘80s and ‘90s,” he added. “It was a very moving moment.”

The other two Class of 2025 inductees were a pair of players in Chloe Landers of Glastonbury High School and Alyssa Naeher of Christian Heritage School in Trumbull.

Landers was the state’s Gatorade Player of the Year for the 2019-20 season before going on to play for the Huskies at UConn. Naeher played at Penn State University and is now playing goalie for Chicago Stars FC of the National Women’s Soccer League (NWSL).

Selectmen Advance Bacon Roof Replacement

By Toriana Williams

During the Jan. 15 meeting, the Colchester Board of Selectmen devoted the majority of its discussion to large-scale capital planning, including athletic facility improvements, the replacement of the roof and Bacon Academy and acceptance of a state grant aimed at reducing municipal solid waste.

$14.56 Million Referendum Authorized

The most substantial, and perhaps most well-known topic in Colchester as of late, was a proposed $14,562,400 capital improvement project for athletic facilities at Bacon Academy and the town's recreational complex. After discussion, the board unanimously voted to move the proposal forward to a special town meeting on Feb 10, followed by a referendum on Feb. 24.

The resolution approved by the board authorizes bonding for the full amount and places the question before voters. The ballot language states:

“Shall the Town of Colchester appropriate and authorize the Board of Selectmen to expend a sum not to exceed $14,562,400 for capital improvements to the Town's athletic facilities located at Bacon Academy and the Recreation Complex and authorize the issuance of bonds and notes to finance the portion of the appropriation not defrayed from grants or other funds?”

Representatives from the building committee and FieldTurf were present to answer questions about schedule, construction phasing and risk factors. Regional Vice President Andrew Dyjak explained that the project would be phased, with the stadium field, track and surrounding amenities targeted for completion by early August 2026 to allow fall sports to proceed as scheduled. Additional work on baseball, softball and recreational fields would follow, with full completion anticipated by the end of 2026.

CCT Presents Sister Act Next Month

Colchester Community Theatre (CCT) will present Sister Act through special arrangements with Music Theatre International, on Friday, Feb. 13, at 7 p.m.; Saturday, Feb. 14, at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m.; and Sunday, Feb. 15, at 2 p.m. All shows will be at the Bacon Academy auditorium, 611 Norwich Ave.

When disco diva Deloris Van Cartier witnesses a murder, she is put into protective custody in the most unexpected of places: a convent! Disguised as a nun, she finds herself at odds with both the rigid lifestyle and uptight Mother Superior. Using her unique disco moves and singing talent to inspire the choir, Deloris breathes new life into the church and community but, in doing so, blows her cover. Soon, the gang is giving chase, only to find them up against Deloris and the power of her newly found sisterhood.

Based on the hit Broadway musical, which was in turn adapted from the hit 1992 movie

Concerns were raised regarding permitting delays and subsurface conditions. Dyjak acknowledged that unknown soil conditions could affect the timeline and stated that “you don’t know exactly what’s underneath the field in that large of a space,” but added that contingency time and budget allowances were built into the estimate.

Board members raised the possibility of contaminated soil, citing a past example in another town. Dyjak responded that contamination testing had not yet been conducted but said that any testing required by local or state agencies would be completed immediately after a successful referendum. He stated that the high-end project estimate accounts for potential remediation.

Selectman Tim Vaillancourt, a Republican, said he was going to vote to send the question to referendum “and let the citizens decide.”

$5 Million Bonding Proposal

The board next considered a $5,000,000 bonding proposal for replacement of the roof at Bacon Academy, which was described during the meeting as actively leaking and at the end of its expected service life. The building is approximately 30 years old, and the roof is the same age.

The approved resolution authorizes bonding and places a separate question on the Feb. 24 referendum ballot. The ballot language reads:

“Shall the Town of Colchester appropriate and authorize the Board of Selectmen to expend a sum not to exceed $5,000,000 for replacement of the roof and related improvements at Bacon Academy and authorize the issuance of bonds and notes to finance the portion of the appropriation not defrayed from grants or other funds?”

During discussion, concern was raised about the precision of the $5 million estimate. Vaillancourt stated, “It concerns me to vote to bond starring Whoppi Goldberg, features music by Tony- and eight-time Oscar-winner Alan Menken.

$5 million on a ‘maybe.’” He then requested more detailed written estimates and questioned whether the amount would be sufficient if costs exceed projections.

Selectman Art Shilosky, a Republican, responded that the estimate was based on square footage pricing and consultations with roofing contractors, and that the figure intentionally reflected the high end of the expected range. It was also explained that bonding for the full amount would allow flexibility to address related HVAC improvements if costs came in under budget.

The board discussed the possibility of pursuing state reimbursement through the Department of Administrative Services non-priority list, which would require the creation of a building committee. The resolution included language authorizing such a committee, with the Board of Education chair serving as an “ex officio” member to comply with statutory requirements.

Despite reservations expressed during discussion, the board voted unanimously to advance the roof replacement proposal to referendum.

Pay-As-You-Throw

The board also unanimously approved acceptance of a $99,556 grant from the Connecticut Department of Energy and Environmental Protection under its Sustainable Materials Management Round 2 (SMMR2) program.

Planning Director Nicole Haggerty presented the proposal and explained that Connecticut municipalities face rising costs due to shipping solid waste out of state. She noted that Colchester residents either contract privately for curbside pickup or use the town transfer station under a pay-as-you-throw system.

America250, also known as the United States Semiquincentennial, encourages communities across the country to reflect on America’s past, celebrate the present, and inspire the future. Colchester’s efforts will highlight the town’s history, civic pride, and sense of community.

The town is seeking ideas for community-led events and activities. Some suggested activities include historical presentations, educational programs, cultural performances, exhibits, walking tours, service projects, student initiatives, and family-friendly celebrations that

Dean’s List

Colchester residents Sydney Barber and Juliana Martino made the fall 2025 Dean’s List at Assumption University in Worcester, Mass.

The grant is structured in three phases. Phase one focuses on data collection to understand waste volumes and disposal costs. Phase two would explore improvements to the existing pay-as-you-throw system, including the possibility of town-branded trash bags purchases at retail locations. Phase three would involve implementation and evaluation, if the town chose to proceed.

Haggerty emphasized that participation is voluntary at each phase and that the town may stop after data collection with no financial penalty. She also noted that the grant could support exploration of food waste composting as a way to reduce disposal costs.

The board voted unanimously to accept the grant.

Other Business

Earlier in the meeting, the board approved three contracts related to fire safety services at the Colchester Senior Center, including fire alarm monitoring, sprinkler inspection and extinguisher services.

The selectmen also conducted interviews with two applications for alternate positions on the Commission on Aging. Both applicants discussed backgrounds in senior advocacy, fraud prevention and volunteer work. No appointments were made at this meeting; selections are expected at a subsequent session.

Later agenda items included discussion of a proposed Parks and Recreation administrative assistant position to replace a vacant program specialist role. The change would increase the hourly wage. The discussion addressed budget impacts beginning in the next fiscal year, and no final action was taken.

Economic Development Discussed at POCD Meeting

By Anne Lilburn

East Hampton hosted one of several planned community sessions to discuss the town's upcoming revision of its Plan of Conservation and Development (POCD) this past Tuesday evening.

This first session focused on economic development, and residents had a chance to share their concerns and their visions for the future of the town with the POCD steering committee, including town planner Juliet Hodge.

The meeting involved thoughtful discussions from the public and the committee about the need for economic development in order to expand the town's tax base. Currently, the town's tax burden is weighted heavily towards residents, as opposed to commercial activity, and Hodge and others made the case for opening the door to smartly placed commercial development in order to take some of the pressure off of residential taxpayers.

Despite the acknowledgement that development might lead to lower taxes in the future, some in the audience worried that any moves to make the town more palatable to commercial enterprises might also cost money in the short term.

Residents voiced their concerns about overdevelopment and expressed fears that big box stores might arrive in town, but Hodge reassured them that this was unlikely, as East Hampton did not have significant enough traffic flow to attract bigger stores.

Several community members said they hoped that the town might be able to attract businesses to vacant industrial buildings, including old mills and factories. They said they appreciated the buildings' charm and character, noting that they were common across communities in Connecticut and New England and emblematic of the area.

Residents wanted to know how the town could incentivize companies to move in and renovate the existing structures. While there is state funding available for remediation of brownfield properties, Hodge also pointed out that, for many businesses, including those like breweries and light industry, lack of public water sources at those sites held back development.

Throughout the meeting, Hodge, along with Town Council member Karen Wanat, went out of her way to try to steer discussion to practical ways that the POCD could steer and guide future planning decisions in the town. Hodge repeatedly asked community members to elaborate on what specifically they did and didn't like about certain types of development, and to specify what their concerns were. She encouraged community members to think about what things (including building design, location, size limitations, etc.) could help make a project more palatable.

One interesting idea that was spoken about at the meeting was the push to attract some tourism to the area, and the resulting need for a local small hotel or bed and breakfast to support that type of development. Many supported the idea of small businesses in the downtown area and believed that promoting tourism could bring customers to these businesses. Residents also pointed out that local lodging would help them out as residents as well, with some pointing out the challenges they face when family visits.

Towards the end of the meeting – faced with residents who wanted to figure out how to get the businesses they wanted, but not those they did not – Hodge shared a bit of planning strategy with those who attended.

Noting that she and the town were required to approve any projects that adhered to existing planning regulations, Hodge said the best way to move forward to attract the type of development that people wanted, and to dissuade the types of development that they did not want, was to make the planning and zoning regulations difficult to meet for the types of businesses they did not want, and easier to meet for those that they did.

She also encouraged residents to think about where they would be most comfortable seeing new development, adding that for many, placing development in areas where there already were businesses was more comfortable than intruding on open space or residential areas.

This was just the first of several POCD Steering Committee meetings that will seek to get community input, along with a POCD community survey that will also be available. The next community session will concern housing and will take place on Thursday, Jan. 29, at 5:30 p.m. at Town Hall.

Lions Collecting Silverware, Rolling Suitcases

The East Hampton Lions work very closely with the local food bank and the Amazing Grace Food Pantry in Middletown, along with St. Vincent de Paul in Middletown. The Lions have been asked to collect silverware and rolling suitcases.

Many of you may ask – what do they want with silverware and rolling suitcases?

Every day, meals are served in the St. Vincent de Paul soup kitchen. Plastic utensils are too expensive so the workers use silverware. The homeless are known to “borrow” the silverware, the Lions said, so kitchen staff frequently run low.

As for the rolling suitcases: Many of the clients at Amazing Grace walk to the food bank – and many are elderly and unable to carry their food to their homes, especially if they are given milk, five pounds of potatoes, and other produce. The food pantry does have a few shopping carts that it lends out, but certainly not enough, the Lions said. Also, the items in the shopping cart are visible to all as they walk sometimes four or five blocks to their home, which the Lions said is not safe. Rolling suitcases feature multiple compartments, the contents are not visible, and they're easier to roll than shopping carts. The homeless may also store their belongings in them. Although they prefer not to have extra-large suitcases, since the main purpose of these suitcases is to transport their food.

For the next two weeks there will be a bin at Ace Hardware to drop off both your silverware and suitcases that you would like to donate.

If you have any questions, call Lion Mary Krogh at 860-977-5760.

More than three decades after officials first started talking about it, Portland is finally set to make public access to the Connecticut River a reality.

over the years, and that last fall, volunteers helped to clear out invasive plants, brush and garbage that had accumulated. More recently, construction equipment moved in to begin the excavation for the road and parking lot.

Pear said his eventual vision for the project would have the new park eventually connected to the town’s existing Riverfront Park via pedestrian pathways, and also to the existing Air Line Trail, to allow an interconnected path that unites the riverfront with the town’s other natural highlights. He said he hoped the new park would involve picnicking areas, hiking trails, and fishing access, in addition to the boat launch. Sharr said he eventually hoped to see a boat house where residents could store kayaks and meet up as well.

Pelton has been involved in advocating for the project since taking office last year. In an earlier interview, Pelton emphasized that this was the first public access to the river in two generations, and said he was happy to see the town connecting with its waterfront.

Funding the project took some work, said both Sharr and Pear. To date, the project has received a $4,000 grant from The Rockfall Foundation, which promotes environmental education and conservation, and a large, $300,000 grant from the state. Sharr and Pear both credited state Sen. Norm Needleman (D-33) and state Rep. Christie Carpino (R-32) with helping the town to secure that state funding. Now, they are just trying to get across the finish line in time for a ribbon-cutting sometime in May or June.

“My kayaks are waiting,” said Pear. “We’re all excited and we’re just kind of saying that once we get this done, we’re gonna take those kayaks and we’ll probably have, I don’t know, maybe 50 people that would like to float our kayaks in in the water on the day we have a ribbon-cutting ceremony.”

The Riverfront Access Committee is still continuing to look for funding from a variety of sources, including small contributions from townspeople. So far, the town has raised over $8,000 from small donors. Recently, Sharr himself offered up to $10,000 in matching funds for any donors who contributed through the end of January. He said he was happy to commit to that donation.

“I lived in Portland, most of my adult life,” he said. “I raised my family here. I had a business here. The town’s been good to me, and I believe in community service and giving back to the community.”

Sharr emphasized that no donation was too small. Sharr said checks can be made out to the Brownstone Quorum with a memo note designating the Riverfront Access, and mailed to P.O. Box 402, Portland, CT 06480. Anyone who prefers to make a donation through an employer sponsored plan or Donor Advised Fund can contact Sharr at 860-836-8496 for further information.

DPWAC Discusses Letters, Legal Lines

By Toriana Williams

The Department of Public Works Action Committee (DPWAC) convened a special meeting on Jan. 13 to focus on two central issues: the legal boundaries between education and advocacy for committee members, and how to respond to recent letters to the editor criticizing the proposed public works facility project. While no formal votes were taken beyond adjournment, the discussion revealed the committee's ongoing struggle to balance transparency, accuracy and public communication amid heightened public scrutiny.

Advocacy Vs. Education

The first major agenda item was a conference with the town attorney to clarify what constitutes permissible education versus prohibited advocacy by DPWAC members. This issue has taken on increased importance as public debate around the DPW project has intensified and committee members have become more visible in community discussions.

Early in the discussion, Town Attorney Ken Slater offered a straightforward framing of the issue, stating that “the simplest way to avoid the issue of advocacy by Committee members is to form a PAC (Political Action Committee).” This comment set the tone for a detailed exchange about the rights and limitations of committee members, particularly when acting in different capacities.

It was confirmed that committee members, even those who are also elected officials, are legally permitted to join a political action committee as private citizens. However, the distinction between acting as a private individual and acting as a member of a town-appointed committee was emphasized repeatedly. The conversation returned again and again to intent, context and the use of public resources.

Committee members sought clarity on whether sharing information about the DPW project could be interpreted as advocacy. The distinction drawn was that providing factual, publicly available information – such as presentations already delivered to the Town Council – generally falls within acceptable educational activity. In contrast, sharing non-public materials, including internal architectural renderings or preliminary planning documents, could raise concerns if used outside official channels.

Another recurring theme was the use of town resources. Members discussed whether email systems, meeting time or committee titles could be used when communicating about the project in public forums. The consensus was cautious: while education is allowed, even well-intentioned communication could be perceived as advocacy if it appears to promote a particular outcome or influence voters.

Though no formal action was taken, the discussion underscored a growing awareness among committee members that their words, roles and methods of communication matter as much as the information itself.

Letters to the Editor Take Center Stage

The second agenda item, which dealt with recent Rivereast letters to the editor, was the most pointed and arguably the most consequential portion of the meeting. Committee members turned their attention to public commentary that they said contains factual inaccuracies about the DPW project, particularly regarding projected costs and planning alternatives.

DPWAC member Richard Steiner highlighted a specific claim circulating in print that placed the cost of the proposed Horton Boulevard facility at $8 million. According to the discussion, this figure was drawn from estimates generated eight to 10 years ago and represented only a portion of the total expense. As stated during the meeting, that figure “was for building construction only, and did not include site work, site development or utility hookups, among other costs,” he explained.

Members emphasized that more recent, though still unofficial, projections paint a significantly different picture. Full site development, including all associated infrastructure, was described as being “closer to $17 million.” The committee expressed concern that outdated or incomplete figures were being presented to the public as current and comprehensive, potentially skewing public understanding of the project.

The conversation then shifted to whether and how the committee should respond. While there was agreement that inaccuracies should be corrected, members were mindful of their earlier discussion about advocacy. Responding as a committee could raise legal or ethical questions, particularly if the response were perceived as promoting the project rather than simply correcting the record.

Another major topic within this agenda item was the recurring public demand for a “Plan B.” Committee members explained that alternative site plans are not being withheld out of unwillingness or lack of creativity, but because of the substantial costs involved. Developing a second fully realized site plan would require significant additional funding, time and professional services, all without assurance that it would ultimately be used.

The committee discussed how this nuance is often lost in public debate, where the absence of an alternative is sometimes portrayed as a lack of diligence rather than a financial constraint.

Ultimately, the committee agreed on a cautious path forward. Rather than issuing a formal response as DPWAC, one member volunteered to draft a letter to the editor in a personal capacity. This approach was seen as a way to address factual inaccuracies while respecting the legal boundaries discussed earlier in the evening.

Taken as a whole, the meeting reflected a committee operating under increasing public pressure while attempting to remain within clearly defined legal and ethical lines. The dual focus on advocacy versus education and on responding to public criticism illustrates the complexity of overseeing a major municipal project in a politically engaged community. While the DPWAC did not take formal action on the substance of the project itself, the discussions made clear that how information is shared may be just as important as the information being shared.

step forward in explaining the importance of the plan to rebuild at Old Colchester Road and why it should be supported by the residents of Hebron.

The second piece of misinformation being pushed once again is that the land at 17 Kinney Road, aka the Horton Property, was purchased for a public works and municipal complex. That is simply not the case. The municipal complex may have been one concept presented, but the minutes of the Feb. 21, 2019 public hearing clearly report the statement of the town manager: “A. Tierney stated that this discussion and the Special Town Meeting were for the acquisition of the parcel.” This was followed by the statement from a member of the Board of Selectmen, “J. Collins reiterated this is a vote on the purchase of the land, will be looking for public input on use of land as it moves forward.” The grassroots community support to preserve this remarkable property is exactly the public input that was sought by the BOS.

I agree with the sentiment in Todd Habicht's letter last week: the DPW project has been a challenging but productive learning experience. Who knew that the property at 17 Kinney Road would reveal such depths of environmental, historic, educational and economic potential? Mr. Habicht suggests building a school there. I would suggest the school is already there. With willing volunteers, this property can become a valuable outdoor center for a unique multidisciplinary educational and tourism experience.

Sincerely,

Where Neighbors Become Friends

To the Editor:

There is something quietly beautiful happening at the Senior Center, and I want to share it because I know how hard it can be to walk through a new door alone.

Many people tell me they are interested in joining but are hesitant because they do not know anyone, or worry they will not fit in, or simply feel unsure about trying something new. I understand that feeling more than most. Stepping into a new space takes courage at any age.

But here is what I see every day: friendships forming over shared lunches, gentle laughter during a card game, strangers becoming walking partners, people checking in on each other, and new members being welcomed as if they have been here for years. Several individuals who recently joined told me they wished they had come sooner. They found what so many of us are craving, connection, routine, and people who look forward to seeing them.

The truth is, you do not need to arrive with a friend to have one. You simply need to show up once, and the rest begins to unfold naturally.

We offer programs, activities, wellness classes, and educational forums, but at the heart of it all is something even more important, community.

If you have been thinking about joining us, I want you to know you will be greeted, included, and supported every step of the way. You will not be an outsider standing on the edge. We would love to have you.

The senior center is many things, but above all, it is a place where friendships are built and where people feel valued. In a world that can be lonely, that matters.

We hope to see you soon.

Sincerely,
Sarah Elliott Caratasios LMSW
Director, Portland Waverly Senior Center/
Municipal Agent

It's Time to Revisit Kinney

To the Editor:

Now that the numbers are coming into focus, it's time to reassess where we stand in the DPW debate. This isn't about blaming anyone involved so far. The residents advocating for Kinney Road have spent years relentlessly promoting their vision for the neighborhood, and in their position many of us might do the same.

But a few key facts keep getting lost. The town originally purchased the property through a formal process with municipal facilities in mind, something clearly reflected in the Hebron Open Space and Acquisition Committee's 1/16/19 meeting, which noted the land “would be available for future town facilities (Public Works...)”

A separate, legitimate siting process later identified the Kinney parcel as the preferred location for the new DPW. Town leaders stepped back from that decision only after sustained political pressure.

That pressure has repeatedly steered this project off-course. Relying on an informal survey to guide major municipal planning is a prime example. We are a representative republic, not a community governed by SurveyMonkey results. A small, organized group of NIMBY voices, however earnest, should not outweigh what serves the entire town.

And now we know the consequences: sharply higher costs, a lengthy closure of the transfer station, an expensive and inconvenient curbside system, and inadequate facilities for our workers. With this information in hand, reconsidering Kinney is not just reasonable – it's necessary.

Today's leaders didn't create this situation; earlier boards set it in motion. But our current officials, many recently elected on promises of accountability and fresh thinking, now have the responsibility to represent the majority, not simply the loudest. Starting their terms by advancing an inflated DPW plan while educators are on the chopping block sends exactly the wrong message. It's time to revisit Kinney.

Heidi was raised in Colchester by her grandparents, Lydia and Michael Kmick. She married the love of her life, Duane Palmes, on Dec. 24, 1997. Heidi loved the spring and summer months when she could vacation at York Beach in Maine, or go blue crabbing, or gardening in her own backyard. She was a 17-year member of the Colchester Volunteer Fire Company, volunteering as an MRT and Fire Police. She once received the Life Saving Award. Heidi enjoyed celebrating the holidays, but she particularly loved decorating and passing out candy to the hundreds of trick-or-treaters that passed through their neighborhood each year.

Portland

Mary Stewart Anderson

Mary Stewart Anderson, 64, of Portland, passed away unexpectedly Saturday, Jan. 17. She was born Aug. 27, 1961, at Middlesex Hospital to Calvin H. Stewart and Marie (Cofrancesco) Stewart.

She is survived by her husband, James Anderson of Portland. Mary is also survived by her older sister, Lisa (David) Jolley of East Berlin, Conn. Mary leaves behind two children and a grandson, Erica Marie and Alan Michael, both from Portland, and her beloved grandson, Parker James Anderson. Mary leaves behind a rather large extended family and many dear friends. She is also predeceased by some of her beloved friends and family of whom she talked about and missed dearly; always reminiscing of them throughout her days.

Growing up and graduating in Middletown, she would always talk about her upbringing on Fisher Road and being outside all day long until she was called for dinner. Hanging out mostly at Veterans Park with all her neighborhood friends.

Mary held a variety of positions throughout her life including clerk-typist with the State of Connecticut, Brooks/Rite-Aid, and Shop-Rite (to name a few). She had many hobbies throughout her life including going to the lake to do her crossword puzzles, scratch a lottery ticket in hopes for the big win, or to simply take a "cat nap," which she was able to do anywhere she went. She had a tremendous love for a variety of things including: The Green Bay Packers, UConn basketball, Budweiser beer (non-alcoholic the last few years), the color blue, black cats, all types of music especially Karen Carpenter and Michael Jackson, and especially enjoyed BBQs on her father's side of the family. Her favorite restaurant to visit for Mother's Day and her birthday was always Lenny and Joe's Fishtales in Westbrook.

If anyone knew Mary, even if just for a moment, one of the first questions she would ask a new face would have been "When's your birthday?" and from that point on, whenever she saw you again, she would know you by exactly that - your birthday. It was quite impressive to everyone how she could remember all those dates (this included famous celebrities too).

Mary loved to laugh and have a good time. She had a great sense of humor. She never took life too seriously. She easily made friends anywhere she went; she was anything but shy. Her passing comes as a complete shock to all and she will be sorely missed by everyone who knew and loved her.

Funeral services will be held Saturday, Jan. 24, at 11 a.m., in Zion Lutheran Church, 183

William St., Portland. Burial will be in Swedish Cemetery, Portland. The family will receive friends on Saturday, Jan. 24, at Zion Lutheran Church, from 10 a.m. until the time of the service.
